David Crockett Birthplace State Park

David Crockett Birthplace State Park is located at the confluence of the Nolichucky River and Limestone Creek in Greene County, Tennessee. This 105-acre park honors one of our nations' most famous individuals. It is home to an 18th-century farmstead, which features a replica cabin of the type in which David Crockett might have lived in, gardens, animal paddocks, and costumed living history interpreters. There is a museum dedicated to Crockett and a gift shop featuring crafts by local artisans. Located nearby is a monument to Crockett containing native stones donated from each of the 50 states. The park has a diversity of natural settings ranging from forested limestone bluffs to meadows and tree-lined streams, all providing exceptional bird and wildlife viewing opportunities.

Museum

The David Crockett Birthplace Museum contains items common to life on the eastern frontier, as well as portraits and documents relating to David Crockett. A short film provides information about Crockett's life. The museum is open Monday through Friday from 8:00 AM - 4:30 PM closed from noon to 1:00 PM, and Saturday and Sunday 10:00 AM - 4:30 PM.

Planned Programs

The Jacob Brown Trade Faire takes place in May. Eighteenth-century vendors are on site selling wares, while demonstrators in period attire display primitive living skills. The Crockett Days Celebration, held in August, celebrates the pioneer lifestyle and features living history exhibitions and re-enactors in period dress from the late 18th century.

The Crockett Homestead is a living history museum, where you can catch a glimpse into 18th-century frontier life up close and personal. It is open daily.

Historical significance

Born in 1786, David Crockett epitomizes the strength and character vital to our nation's westward expansion during the pioneer era. With virtually no formal education, he rose from the depths of poverty to national fame and a seat in the United States Congress. His fame and popularity during his life were celebrated in books and plays. His death at the Alamo in 1836 marked the beginning of his legend. David Crockett Birthplace State Park is dedicated to the memory of this exceptional figure in our nation's history.

Camping

The park has 83 sites consisting of 48 full hook-up sites with water, sewer, and 50 amp electrical service; 16 sites with water and 30 amps electrical hook-ups and 13 primitive tent sites. Campfires are permitted only in designated fire rings or in above ground fire stands equipped with screens and covers. The campground is located near the scenic Nolichucky River. A playground and swimming pool are also located nearby. All sites can be reserved online.

Swimming

The swimming pool is open from Memorial Day to Labor Day. Call for dates in late summer as hours are based on the availability of lifeguards.
