David Crockett State Park

The 1,319-acre park is located along the Little Shoal Creek, three miles from Lawrenceburg. The park offers tent and RV camping, a restaurant, and a swimming pool. Hiking, paddling on Lake Lindsey, fishing, and wildlife viewing are popular activities. There is also an aviary and museum.

Historical Significance

Dedicated in 1959, the park honors one of Tennessee's most famous native sons. David Crockett was a pioneer, soldier, politician, and industrialist. He was born near the little town of Limestone in northeast Tennessee in 1786. In 1817, he moved to Lawrence County and served as a justice of the peace, a colonel of the militia, and state representative. Along the banks of Shoal Creek, in what is now his namesake park, he established a diversified industry consisting of a powder mill, a gristmill and a distillery. All three operations washed away in a flood in September, 1821. Crockett died at the Alamo in 1836, while aiding the Texans in their fight for independence from Mexico.

One bedroom has two queen beds, the master has a queen-size bed and the great room has a queen sleeper sofa. Each cabin is completely furnished and offers a covered patio.
