Standing Stone State Park

Standing Stone State Park is a 1,042-acre park situated atop the eastern edge of the Highland Rim, with the higher Cumberland Plateau just to the east. The park sits in the middle of nearly 11,000 acres of state forest. The area is noted for its geology and natural diversity and the rugged setting is dominated by oak-hickory hardwood forest. Hilltops offer visitors scenic overlooks, while deep wooded coves harbor abundant spring and summer wildflowers and sustain an assortment of mammals, birds, reptiles and amphibians. The park was developed during the Great Depression of the 1930s by the Federal Works Progress Administration. The park takes its name from the Standing Stone, a 12-foot tall rock that stood in adjacent Putnam County beside the Avery Trace, an early federal road, now State Highway 70. The actual Standing Stone was blown up to build a railroad track, which is located just off Hwy 84 in Monterey. A small piece of the stone was saved and placed on a monument, which is located in front of the Library of Monterey.

Fishing

Kelly Lake provides excellent fishing for bass, bluegill, catfish and trout. Black bass must be a minimum of 15 inches. Trout are stocked during the winter. There is a three pole limit per angler from a boat and six pole limit per angler from the bank. Dale Hollow Lake is ten minutes from the park and provides fishing and other water recreation activities.
